Minneapolis - EnergyPrint (www.EnergyPrint.com), a leading innovator of online energy management and reporting tools, has named Amanda M. Spice as data operations manager. EnergyPrint specializes in the development and use of web-based software technologies that help property owners and managers get their arms around their largest and fastest-growing operating expense – energy. Spice will oversee the collection and input of energy data direct from utilities across the country. This information will be translated into powerful energy cost, consumption and carbon analytics to empower EnergyPrint's commercial customers' decision making across their building's portfolios.

EnergyPrint collects and consolidates utility bill information for thousands of commercial utility meters across hundreds of utilities throughout the country. Spice will serve as the company's chief communicator with a significant portion of the nation's 4,000 utility companies -- each of which bills in unique "languages"-- gathering accurate historical data for initial client onboarding and ongoing monthly data collection.

Spice previously served as project developer for Morr Construction Services, Inc. of St. Paul, Minn. She received an MS in Architecture: Sustainable Design from the College of Design at the University of Minnesota, and a BS in Architecture from the College of Architecture and Landscape Architecture / College of Design at the University of Minnesota. She also holds a Minnesota GreenStar certification.

Founded in September 2009, St. Paul-based EnergyPrint is a leading developer of web-based applications for building professionals. EnergyPrint's industry-unique suite of energy insights provides energy data management services to help measure and evaluate whole-building energy consumption, allowing management to take control over their building expenses. The company currently benchmarks buildings in nearly 40 states.
